STAFF EXPANSION AT HURST CONTINUES WITH WOODINGS MADE PARTNER

Audit specialist Anthony Woodings has been promoted to partner within the Business Services division of HURST, the Stockport and Manchester accountants and business advisors.

Anthony has worked for HURST for the past nine years, providing audit and corporation tax services to owner managed businesses and other organisations throughout the North West.

Specialisms include carrying out specialist audit work for pension schemes and not-for-profit organisations including charities and schools.

Anthony's promotion shall also see him taking the lead on the firm's technical and compliance aspects of audit regulations and financial reporting.

Anthony's promotion is part of an expansion at HURST that has seen a number of recent promotions and new staff appointments. These have taken place following a wave of new client wins at the firm.

Said HURST managing partner Tim Potter: "Although some accountancy practices in the region are making redundancies during this economic turndown, we are continuing to actively recruit.

"This is a reflection of the amount of new business we are continuing to attract from owner managers of medium sized firms and businesses who were previously with the Big 4 or national firms."

After graduating from Leeds University, Anthony trained and then qualified as an accountant with Booth Ainsworth before joining HURST.
